International Students Office Newsletter—What is it?

For our new students, this is the first ISO newsletter you've received, but certainly not the last! The ISO newsletter is a monthly publication brought to you by the International Students Office. The purpose of the ISO newsletter is to keep you updated not only with events and activities happening within the ISO, but also events and activities happening around campus, as well as important dates and reminders.

Another function of the ISO newsletter is to give voice to our International community by featuring short biographies of our students and cultural articles on traditions and customs of our students' home countries.

Lastly, the ISO newsletter also contains articles on American traditions and customs that may be new or unfamiliar to students from other countries.

This newsletter is for you! If you would like to write for the ISO newsletter, (about you, your home country, about your experience in the U.S./at Madonna, or anything!), or if you would like to suggest an article for the ISO newsletter, please contact Amy in room 1209, or at aldickerson@madonna.edu

We would LOVE to hear from you!

Meet Your Professor Over Lunch!

If you check your email, you've probably already heard of the meet your professor program. (If you don't check your email, you should!) This is a fantastic new program for international students that allows them to get to know a faculty or staff member better by going out for lunch with him/her.

International students can participate by going to the International Students page on the Madonna Website and clicking on the "Meet Your Professor" link on the left side of the page, then following the instructions given. After you select a faculty or staff member from the participant list (does not have to be YOUR professor), contact them to set a date and time, then contact the ISO with your details. The ISO will pay for your lunch, as well as your professor's ($10 limit/person).

Please contact Grace Philson in room 1207 if you would like to have lunch with one of our amazing Madonna staff members!

September's Featured Student:

My name is Ian Christie, I am from Ireland. I am an under grad at the University of Ulster Magee in Northern Ireland studying Business Information Systems. I am part of the student exchange program at home known as SUSA (Study USA). Ever since the program was mentioned to me nearly 3 years ago I knew I had to be part of it. I was very excited about doing it and knew that it would help my development educationally and socially. I am married to Andrena, have 2 kids (Zach and Josh). I miss them every day. I know though that the sacrifice I am making will ultimately benefit my family. I arrived at Madonna on the 26th of August and will leave in May 2014 - I am here for 2 semesters.

I have had a wonderful experience since arriving on campus and intend making the most of my experience here. I have so far made many nice people, some I would consider friends and perhaps life long friends. I have got a job on campus, have been asked to get involved in some projects on campus which I am going to do. I am very much looking forward to my year ahead.

★☆☆★ Strange American Customs: Tipping ★☆☆★

One custom common to North America, but fairly uncommon to many other parts of the world is tipping. Tipping is the practice of leaving money (in addition to your bill) for someone working in a service job—like a waiter. Tipping can be very stressful for those who aren't used to it, so here is a basic guide to help you out!

Who gets tips?

Waiters: Unless otherwise stated, you should always tip a waiter! Waiters work for very low pay (lower than minimum wage) because they receive tips.

How much?

Standard tipping is 15% of your bill. Many people choose to tip more if they like their waiter and had a very pleasant experience and very good service. 20% is a good tip for good service. Anything higher is very generous! Anything lower than 15% is considered a little rude and shouldn't be done unless your waiter was awful! (Not liking your food isn't a reason to not tip!) It is VERY rude to not tip at all!

Who else gets tips?

Service Jobs: Generally this group includes hair/nail stylists, drivers, luggage handlers at airports and hotels, cleaning staff, room service, etc. In most cases tipping is optional, but appreciated.

How much?

People disagree. Unlike waiters, these jobs are not paid below minimum wage, so the tip amount is not generally a standard 15%, but usually a few dollars per service, depending on price, length of time, and satisfaction. A tip for a haircut/style, for example, might be anywhere between $3 and $15, depending on the service, how much you like it, and how generous you are!

At places that have tip jars (like coffee shops), tipping is not standard, but again, appreciated.

Usually the change left from your dollar will suffice as a tip.

If you still aren't sure about tipping, there are plenty of tips for tipping available online!

Mid-Autumn Festival

The Mid-Autumn Festival (中秋节 in Chinese, Tết Trung Thu in Vietnamese) in China occurs on the 15th Day of the 8th Lunar month each year. This year, that day fell on September, 19th.

There are many legends attached to the origin of the moon festival, all of which revolve around the ancient moon goddess, Chang'e. Chang'e was cast out of the heavens and sent to Earth to live as a mortal with her husband. Her husband, striving for immortality, seeks out an elixir to make him immortal. Chang'e then swallows the elixir herself (in some versions she steals the elixir, in others she swallows it accidentally). Because she swallows the whole pill and not the half she was supposed to take, she floats up to the moon, where she lives forever with a lumberjack who was exiled there by the gods, and a rabbit who is also an apothecary.

There are many traditions attached to the Mid-Autumn Festival. In China it is a 3-day public holiday (often placed between weekends so people can take a 7-day holiday!). It is also celebrated in Vietnam, Taiwan and Hong Kong.

Although the ancient festival revolved around the practice of moon worship—the moon deity Chang'e (also written Chang-o) being closely related to rejuvenation, women, and fertility—the modern celebrations have changed over the years.

Family is still an important part of the holiday, with family members generally traveling to come together. Originally mooncakes were made during the festival, and the head of the household would separate the cake into the number family members, giving one piece to each person. This represented the uniting of families. Today, mooncakes are still an important part of the celebration, but they have become more commonplace as gifts, readily available in bakeries, and generally everyone gets their own.

Moon gazing is still an important part of the celebration, and many families enjoy looking at the full moon together. In some areas lion dances are performed, in others incense and lanterns are lit for Chang'e. In Vietnam children wear masks and lion dancers go door-to-door to wish luck upon the households.

Did you know...?

Chang'e was mentioned in a conversation between Houston and the Apollo 11 crew just before the first Moon landing in 1969:

Houston: Among the large headlines concerning Apollo this morning, there's one asking that you watch for a lovely girl with a big rabbit. An ancient legend says a beautiful Chinese girl called Chang-o has been living there for 4,000 years. It seems she was banished to the Moon because she stole the pill of immortality from her husband. You might also look for her companion, a large Chinese rabbit, who is easy to spot since he is always standing on his hind feet in the shade of a cinnamon tree. The name of the rabbit is not reported.

Buzz Aldrin: Okay. We'll keep a close eye out for the bunny girl.

Each of China's Lunar Probes has been named after Chang'e (Chang'e 1 and Chang'e 2). Chang'e 3, a lunar rover, is due to launch in December 2013.
